Wednesday October 13th @ 7pm, Strafford Room
Not wanting to face a court martial for being gay, Reichen had to live in two different worlds. One world where he had to watch everything he did and said for fear of being outed; the other world where he was completely free to be himself. "One of the hardest things for me to reconcile was the fact that I was completely open with my family and friends but faced the very real possibility of being court marshaled and going to jail if I was open with my 'work colleagues'." ### What Makes You Tick? w/Marc Eliot

None of those things was particularly extraordinary—except for this fact: he did them with Tourette's syndrome and only four feet of intestines. Marc's humorous thought-provoking program will engage and inspire everyone. Sponsored by the MUB, Disability Services, & the Presidents' Commissions
